Stop of juvenile yields pot, $12,000 cash, more

Courier staff report

About 37 grams of marijuana, THC oil and $12,000 in cash were found during a traffic stop of a juvenile Monday night on Michigan Road.

Jefferson County Chief Deputy Sheriff John Wallace said he does not remember a time in which the department seized that much cash at once.

Sheriff's Deputy Linton Spry stopped the vehicle on Michigan Road near Virginia Avenue around 10:45 p.m. Monday and noted a strong odor of marijuana from the car as he approached.

A release from the sheriff's department said Spry searched the vehicle, citing the marijuana odor as probable cause, and found the marijuana, THC oil and cash. The release said the money was in varied denominations.

The marijuana was inside packaging marked "CA" and containing a government warning that the product inside was marijuana and that it should only be possessed by persons 21 or older, leading the sheriff's department to believe the marijuana is from California, where it is legal.

All items found were seized as evidence.

The driver was a 17-year-old male from Hanover and the passenger was Maggie Miller, 19, of Madison.

Law enforcement took the juvenile into custody on charges of dealing marijuana, possession of marijuana, possession of THC oil and maintaining a common nuisance.

The news release said Miller was issued a misdemeanor summons to appear in court on a charge of possession of marijuana.

Jefferson County Sheriff's Deputy Brent Bennett assisted Spry with the investigation, which is ongoing.

Deadline Friday to order native plants

Special to the Courier

Tomorrow, March 15, is the deadline to order native wildflower plants for this season's planting.

Pickup of the plants — arranged by the Jefferson County Pollinator Action Group — will be in early May at the Fairgrounds.

The plants are $3 each.

"Here's what I think is special: These plants can bloom in the first year you add them to your home," said Vicki Wehner, coordinator at the Jefferson County Soil and Water Conservation District.

"Planting from seed works perfectly if you're planting a large area, like a farm field or an old hay field. It's more economical that way, because seed is cheaper than plants. But native wildflowers don't bloom during their first year of growth – if you plant a seed, they take a whole year just to grow roots," Wehner said.

"A lot of homeowners want to plant a smaller area, perhaps 10x10' or a side flower bed, and they want to see blooms and butterflies in the first season.

"That's what's great about the plant sale: We're offering one-year-old plants, so they've already got a great root system," Wehner said. "They're ready to bloom this year!"

The plants come from Spence Nursery in northern Indiana. Each plant is actually a "plug" – a one-year-old start in a small pot (2 3/8" square and 3 ¾" deep). This size allows for more root growth, which the natives need.

"We think people will be impressed by how healthy the plants are, and how quickly their pollinator habitats can take off and grow when they start with plugs," Wehner said.

The plant sale includes almost 20 wildflowers that are native to Jefferson County.

Color brochures will be available at the Jefferson County Soil and Water Conservation District at the Fairgrounds or for download free from https://jeffersoncounty.in.gov/458/Soil-Water

The brochure has an order form. The form and payment can be mailed or taken to the Soil and Water Conservation District office.

The brochure explains a bit about each plant, including what soil types and amount of sun it needs, and when the plant blooms.

"And don't worry if you aren't sure what to plant," Wehner said. "We will have some pre-made bundles and some ideas for how to lay out your garden. We can help you get your habitat off to a good start." The bundles start at $25.

Last year, Jennings County offered a similar sale. Locals purchased and planted more than 2,500 plants.

Their group is not offering the plant sale this year, and instead is sending customers to Jefferson County.

"We've had a lot of help from the Jennings County pollinator group and from all the volunteers who are part of the Jefferson County Pollinator Action Group," Wehner said.

"We can't wait to hand off native plants to people," she said.

The Pollinator Action Group, a committee of the Soil and Water Conservation District, is open to anyone interested in promoting the planting of habitats to attract butterflies, bees and birds to spread pollen and to provide food.

Members include individuals, businesses, organizations, institutions and others. The meetings and participation are open to the public.

The next Pollinator Action Group meeting will be Thursday, March 21 on the second floor of the Ivy Tech Community College in Madison. There is no membership fee.

Clark County overdose spike seen last week

By APRILE RICKERT
(Jeffersonville & New Albany) News and Tribune

CLARK COUNTY — Health officials in Clark County are asking the public to be alert to more potent strains of fentanyl-laced drugs in the area after a spike in overdoses late last week.

The Clark County Health Department issued a public health notice Saturday afternoon to alert the community of increased overdose activity, which had started about mid-week, health officer Dr. Eric Yazel said. The notice states that while verification is still pending, it is believed the increase may be due to a drug supply with higher fentanyl content than usual in the area.

Yazel said the roughly five cases over five days last week may include multiple fatalities, pending coroner's results; this is about the same number the county has been averaging in a month's time over the past year. In February, the health department reported a total of 50 suspected overdose death cases in Clark County in 2018, which was 15 percent lower than 2017 and the lowest total since 2013.

He said the number of overdoses last week were enough that he believed it warranted an alert to help stop subsequent overdoses if there is a stronger strain of drugs in the area. He said Monday he was not aware of more overdoses since the weekend.

"It's a fine line," he said. "We don't want to get alarm fatigue or be the little boy who cried wolf, but we also feel like when we have a certain amount of information we need to notify the public as well."

The alert was the first time the county has had enough information to activate the Everbridge system, an emergency notification program designed to monitor and send resources in overdose situations, funded by a grant awarded last year by the Indiana State Department of Health.

So far, 4 overdose cases in Jefferson County this year

The Jefferson County Coroner's Office has handled four overdose death cases so far this year. Coroner Rodney Nay said tests of three of the four cases showed higher fetanyl levels than normal. Only one overdose death has occurred in Jefferson County in the last month. After the coroner reports are complete, they are shared with law enforcement officials so officials can watch for patterns or changes in patterns.

Turbulence noted in the plane crash fatal to local man

DALLAS (AP) — A Boeing 767 appears to have hit turbulence a minute before it entered a steep descent that ended when the plane smashed into a Texas bay in February, killing all three people aboard, including Jefferson County resident Rick Blakely, who was the pilot.

"Small vertical accelerations" suggest Atlas Air Flight 3591 entered turbulence soon after the pilots had descended to avoid a band of precipitation as they approached a Houston airport, the National Transportation Safety Board said in a preliminary report released Tuesday.

Seconds after leveling off around 6,200 feet, the cargo plane's engines surged to "maximum thrust" and it briefly pointed its nose 4 degrees up, according to flight data. The jet then rapidly swung to point 49 degrees downward and began its drop toward the muddy bay, the federal agency said.

An NTSB spokesman, Keith Holloway, said it is still investigating the underlying cause of the sharp change in pitch.

It's a move that alarmed aviation experts.

"Obviously, going 49 degrees nose down is beyond a radical move," said Todd Curtis, a former Boeing safety engineer who runs AirSafe.com. "That's not something an airplane should be doing, especially at that altitude."

The NTSB previously said cockpit audio suggests the pilots lost control while passing over Trinity Bay, about 40 miles east of George Bush Intercontinental Airport.

Atlas Air Flight 3591, a Boeing 767 flying Amazon parcels from Miami to Houston, crashed Feb. 23 into the bay 35 miles east of Houston.

Indiana offers nonbinary gender option on licenses, IDs

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — Residents who don't identify as male or female have the option starting this month of describing themselves as a nonbinary gender on their driver's licenses and state identification cards. Indiana law requires every application for a driver's license or ID card to include information about the applicant's gender. Residents can now choose the third option "X" instead of the traditional options of "M" or "F" gender identifiers, said Susie Guyer, the bureau's executive director of marketing and communications. The Indiana Bureau of Motor Vehicles decided to offer the option based on a recommendation by the American Academy of Motor Vehicle Administrators, Guyer told The (Northwest Indiana) Times. An applicant requesting the "X" designation must present documentation that proves a permanent gender change, such as an amended birth certificate or a signed doctor's statement, Guyer said. The bureau didn't say how many residents have obtained the "X" gender identifier so far. Oregon, Maine, Minnesota, Colorado, California and Washington, D.C. also offer a nonbinary gender option on licenses and IDs.

5 journalists receive state honors

BLOOMINGTON— The late columnist Matthew Tully of The Indianapolis Star heads a class of five inductees this year onto the Indiana Journalism Hall of Fame. Tully died of cancer at age 49 in October, 2018. He began his career as a reporter for the Gary Post-Tribune and later wrote for the Congressional Quarterly. Also being honored in a ceremony May 18 in Indianapolis are Indiana University lecturer and Indianapolis Star deputy managing editor Nancy Comiskey, Fort Wayne television broadcaster Richard Florea, reporter/editor Andrea Neal, and San Francisco and Terre Haute columnist Stephanie Salter. Florea served as news director at WKJG-TV, where he was the anchor for 17 years. Neal covered the Statehouse for United Press International and later was editorial page editor for the Star.

Dead cows found; farmer charged

WEST COLLEGE CORNER — A farmer faces charges after 38 dead cows were found on his property. The (Richmond) Palladium-Item reported Rodney Sintz, 42, of West College Corner is charged with three counts of failure to properly dispose of a dead animal and three counts of cruelty to an animal. Court documents say an Indiana State Board of Animal Health field veterinarian found the dead cows in various stages of decomposition March 5. Under state law, animals must be properly disposed of within 24 hours of an owner's knowledge that they have died. The veterinarian said other cattle appeared below normal body weight and about half of the herd didn't have access to adequate food and water. A phone call to Sintz's home rang unanswered Tuesday.

Opioid overdose prevention program

CARMEL— An opioid overdose prevention program has been started in Hamilton County. Community Opioid Prevention Efforts Quick Response Teams have been established in Carmel and Westfield as pilot programs. Other parts of the county will be added throughout the year. Each team will be made up of a law enforcement officer, a medic and a peer recovery counselor. Teams hope to meet with patients within 48 to 72 hours after opioid overdoses to check on them and provide details of available services. Services include counseling by a peer recovery coach and information on treatment to stop repeat overdoses. Grants through the Indiana Division of Mental Health and Addictions and the Bureau of Justice Assistance fund the program.

Evansville pushes renewable energy use

EVANSVILLE— The city council says it wants to shift to 100 percent renewable energy for Evansville government operations by 2050. The Evansville Courier & Press reported the non-binding resolution for Evansville that acknowledges an accelerating rate of climate change was adopted Monday. The resolution is a pledge to reduce the city's carbon footprint and increase residents' health and well-being. It also urges Evansville to provide more green infrastructure such as urban tree canopies and electric vehicle charging stations. Councilman Dan McGinn co-authored the resolution. He said it "encourages the city and shows that we care about our children and grandchildren." Councilman John Hayden voted against the resolution, calling it a "great idea" but noting that it includes some "very definitive statements" that he doesn't think they can make.

Allen County jail ends visits; offers video

FORT WAYNE — The Allen County Jail in Fort Wayne no longer will have face-to-face visits with inmates and instead is offering video chats. The (Fort Wayne) Journal Gazette reported the Allen County Sheriff's Department has installed an internet-based service that lets inmates meet with visitors in a set-up similar to Skype or FaceTime. Inmates will be issued computer tablets. Visitors register online and can video chat with inmates from anywhere with an internet connection. Visitors who physically come to the jail and use the technology onsite may communicate for free. Visitors who access the technology offsite are charged. The system has been in place since Feb. 18. The newspaper reported it's not clear how much the chats cost or if the jail receives a portion of the proceeds.

Woman pleads guilty in ex-husband attack

FORT WAYNE — A woman accused of placing a plastic bag over her ex-husband's head and beating him with a hammer is awaiting sentencing after pleading guilty to attempted murder. The Journal Gazette reported Shannon D. Labrosse, 41, of Fort Wayne faces up to 30 years in prison when she's sentenced April 12 after entering the plea Friday in Allen Superior Court. She had been scheduled for trial this week. Authorities said Labrosse placed a plastic bag over the head of her ex-husband, who has multiple sclerosis, in February 2017 as he sat in a recliner at his home. When he tried to get away, she allegedly hit him with a jar and then beat him with a hammer. Thomas Labrosse suffered broken ribs, cuts to his head and other injuries.

Logistics business opens 4th warehouse

PLAINFIELD — A logistics business is opening its fourth warehouse in Plainfield. Officials announced Wednesday that the expansion by Plainfield-based MD Logistics is expected to create up to 50 new jobs by the end of 2023. The company is investing $1 million in building improvements for the temperature-controlled Plainfield storage space, which already is fully operational. The update follows a 2017 expansion announcement that included an increase of its pharmaceutical-grade storage capacity. The company now has more than 300 full-time workers in Plainfield. The Indiana Economic Development offered MD Logistics up to $350,000 in conditional tax credits based on the company's job creation plans.

2 charged in killing; body found in forest

WABASH — State police say two men have been charged with murder in the slaying of another man whose body was left in a forest. Police said the body of Alexis Serrano, 21, was found at the Mississinewa State Forest in Wabash County last June 28. He had been reported missing three weeks earlier. An autopsy determined his death a homicide, but police didn't say how he died. Police said Jose Guadelupe Maya-Sandoval, 36, of Fort Wayne was arrested Friday during a traffic stop. He's being held in the Allen County Jail awaiting transfer to Wabash County. Police said Gerardo Ruiz-Aviles, 33, of Indianapolis was served a warrant Tuesday at the New Castle Correctional Facility, where he's incarcerated on unrelated charges.

Fire heavily damages RV plant

ELKHART— The Elkhart fire chief said a blaze has heavily damaged a recreational vehicle plant. Chief Chad Carey said the fire Tuesday afternoon caused the roof to collapse at the Forest River Plant in Elkhart. Carey said five or six employees were inside the plant when the fire began about 3:30 p.m. because it was the end of the workday. He said the employees reported hearing several small popping noises, went to investigate and discovered the fire. It wasn't immediately clear what caused the fire. Carey said no injuries were reported. The thick black smoke from the fire could be seen from miles away.

Kentucky

Finalists named to fill Supreme Court vacancy

FRANKFORT — The Judicial Nominating Commission has selected three finalists for a vacancy on the Kentucky Supreme Court. The vacancy was created when Justice Bill Cunningham retired. He served a district spanning 24 counties in western Kentucky. Court officials said the nominees to fill the vacancy are David Buckingham of Murray, Tyler Gill of Allensville and Carla Rene' Williams of Dixon. Their names will be submitted to Gov. Matt Bevin, who will appoint a replacement. Buckingham served as a Kentucky Court of Appeals judge from 1997 to 2005. He was a circuit judge from 1987 to 1996. Gill has been a circuit court judge since 1995 and was a district judge before that. Williams has served as a circuit court judge since late 2004. She has been chief regional circuit judge for the Purchase Region since 2007.

House advances plan to ban tobacco at school

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky House of Representatives has approved a bill that would force some school districts to address tobacco use on campus. Lawmakers approved House Bill 11 by a vote of 85-11 on Tuesday. It would ban the use of all tobacco products on school grounds. But, it would give school districts three years to opt out of the law. Ninety-nine of Kentucky's 173 school districts do not ban tobacco products on campus. State law already bans smoking for anyone under 18. But, teachers and other adults can use tobacco on campus, which would include school-sponsored events like football and basketball games. The bill now heads to the state Senate, where a similar proposal passed in 2016.

Governor signs concealed carry bill

FRANKFORT— Legislation allowing adults to carry a concealed handgun without a permit or training has been signed into law by Kentucky Gov. Matt Bevin. The Republican governor signed the bill Monday. Under the legislation, Kentuckians age 21 and up who are able to lawfully possess a firearm can conceal their weapons without a license. It takes effect in late June. State lawmakers approved the bill earlier this month. Bevin has said most Kentuckians support it. Previously, a mandated permit required gun safety training and a fee. Among other things, the bill's opponents had objected to dropping the training requirement as a condition for carrying concealed weapons. Supporters said the measure makes no changes governing where and when people can possess concealed weapons.

Foster care overhaul bill advances

FRANKFORT — Lawmakers are one step away from finishing work on a bill to fine-tune last year's overhaul of the state's child welfare system. The measure was advanced Monday by the Senate Health and Welfare Committee. The House-passed bill goes to the Senate. If it passes intact there, it would go to Gov. Matt Bevin. The lead sponsor is Republican House Speaker Pro Tem David Meade. The bill would extend re-certification periods for foster parents. Meade said foster parents now have to recertify every year. His bill would require recertification every three years. House Bill 446 said the state can petition a court for termination of parental rights if a child has been removed from a home three or more times within 24 months. It seeks to speed adoptions by having lists of relatives available at the start of the process.

Old Friends retirement farm stakes winner

GEORGETOWN— A thoroughbred retirement farm has welcomed the son of a Kentucky Derby winner as its newest resident. Old Friends farm near Georgetown says five-time Grade 1 winner Einstein arrived Monday. The Brazilian-bred horse is the son of 1986 Horse of the Year and Kentucky Derby winner Spend a Buck. Einstein was pensioned to Old Friends by The Stonach Group's Adena Springs. Einstein captured the Anita Handicap and four Grade I stakes on turf, including back-to-back triumphs in the Woodford Reserve Turf Classic at Churchill Downs. In all, Einstein made 30 starts, winning 11 races. He won or placed in 13 stakes, and his career earnings totaled $2.7 million. In 2015, Adena Springs also donated Breeders' Cup Classic winner Alphabet Soup and Belmont Stakes winner Touch Gold to Old Friends.

Park service seeks Camp Nelson comments

NICHOLASVILLE — The National Park Service is seeking public comment as it drafts a document that will help direct the future of Camp Nelson National Monument. A park service statement said it is preparing a foundation document that will guide decision-making at the Civil War site that served as a recruiting ground for black soldiers and a refugee camp for their families. The foundation document identifies a location's significance, its core purpose, its resources and values, and the interpretive themes that tell its unique story. Interest parties can comment during an open house on March 19 at Camp Nelson in Nicholasville or submit them online. Park officials are encouraging comments on the importance of Camp Nelson, on opportunities for access and on any issues that threaten preservation.

Investigation of body found at park

PARK CITY — A woman's body has been found in at Mammoth Cave National Park in what officials are calling a suspicious death. News outlets reported that the body found in Zion Hill Cemetery Monday morning has been identified as that of Mariah Amber Decru, 23, who was from the area. The Park City Volunteer Fire Department notified park rangers of the discovery after realizing that the body was within park grounds. The site is near Interstate 65 in the park's southernmost tip. The National Park Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation were at the site Monday afternoon. No cause of death was immediately identified.

Fort Campbell survey assesses strengths

FORT CAMPBELL — Fort Campbell is surveying soldiers, family members, Army civilians and military retirees about the health and readiness of their military community. Officials with the U.S. Army post straddling the Kentucky-Tennessee line say the Community Strengths and Themes Assessment can be accessed online. The survey is meant to create a snapshot of the quality of life, health, safety and satisfaction within the Army installation environment. Responses are confidential. The survey is open through May 30 and takes 10 to 15 minutes to finish. Findings will be available by the end of the summer.

Questions end school program plans

By BRITTANI HOWELL
(Bloomington) Herald-Times

Two programs about online safety and mental health were canceled at Richland-Bean Blossom Community School Corp. schools after complaints that the programs' parent organization was religious in nature.

The "Get Schooled" program for students and "Technology and Teens" program for parents are put on through Fort Wayne-based RemedyLIVE, a SoulMedic Media Group company. SoulMedic Media identifies itself and RemedyLIVE as Christian organizations.

"We learned that Get Schooled was an interactive and entertaining convocation for Grades 6-12, designed to provide mental health support for students," R-BB Superintendent Jerry Sanders wrote in an email to parents last Saturday. "The purpose of the program was to help students learn that they are not alone in their struggles and to provide information on sources of support available in our own schools and community."

The "Technology and Teens" program was meant to "make parents aware of the dangers of social media," he added.

Sanders canceled the programming, which was scheduled to take place at the end of March, after community members called the district with concerns. School board President Dana Kerr said that to his knowledge, no contract had been signed and no money had changed hands.

"It just wasn't a good fit for this and we're continuing to look at other avenues to look at mental health issues and social media issues," Kerr said.

Sanders said he had checked with other schools and districts that had invited the "Get Schooled" programs for their students and was told the program had no religious content.

But the nature of RemedyLIVE and SoulMedic Media caused concern for some community members.

Susan Kinzer, a parent of an R-BB student, took to social media to criticize SoulMedic Media's website and mission statement, which is to engage youth "in meaningful conversations through technology as a step towards Christ" — i.e., reaching out to "SoulMedics" through an anonymous chat. Those SoulMedics are not counselors, but "rather trained listeners," according to the website.

"That's the biggest thing for me," she said in an interview. "It's not just that it's faith-based and this is a separation of church and state issue, because I know people have a lot of feelings about that. It's that this isn't a true mental health service."

Carol Wilson, who has no children in the school system but does pay taxes in the R-BB district, also objected to the program.

"I very much approve of a suicide prevention/mental health program conducted by a non-religious, properly credentialed organization," she wrote in a Facebook post.

Sanders recently came under fire for issuing a letter to Ellettsville pastors, addressed on R-BB letterhead, asking them to pray for the district. In his email Saturday, he assured parents he had no intention to promote his own beliefs to anyone at R-BB, and that he was searching for ways to address mental health issues and students' relationships with technology.

It's not the only program to draw parents' ire, he pointed out. Last August, the district attempted to bring an anti-bullying program from Middle Way House to the junior high school. Parents criticized that program, too, he said, for "allowing a curriculum that promoted lifestyles that did not represent the values of all of our students."

"Now, I am being accused of allowing a program that discriminates against students," Sanders wrote in the email to parents. "I just want to help kids!"

He said he would continue working with district staff to find other ways to address students' mental health issues.

Dozens ensnared in college admissions scam

BOSTON (AP) — A college admissions scandal moved from bombshell indictments to guilty pleas in a matter of hours, yet the full fallout from the federal case against the rich and famous could take months or more to unfold.

Big names such as actresses Felicity Huffman and Lori Loughlin headline the list of some 50 people charged in documents released Tuesday that describe a scheme to cheat the admissions process at eight sought-after schools. The parents bribed college coaches and other insiders to get their children into selective schools, authorities said.

At the center of the scheme was admissions consultant William "Rick" Singer, founder of the Edge College & Career Network of Newport Beach, California, authorities said. Singer pleaded guilty and his lawyer, Donald Heller, said his client intends to cooperate fully with prosecutors and is "remorseful and contrite and wants to move on with his life."

Prosecutors said that parents paid Singer big money from 2011 up until just last month to bribe coaches and administrators to falsely make their children look like star athletes to boost their chances of getting accepted. The consultant also hired ringers to take college entrance exams for students, and paid off insiders at testing centers to correct students' answers.

Some parents spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and some as much as $6.5 million to guarantee their children's admission, officials said.

"These parents are a catalog of wealth and privilege," U.S. Attorney Andrew Lelling said.

At least nine athletic coaches and 33 parents were charged. Dozens, including Huffman, the Emmy-winning star of ABC's "Desperate Housewives," were arrested by midday Tuesday. Huffman posted a $250,000 bond after an appearance in federal court in Los Angeles. Her husband, actor William H. Macy, has not been charged, though an FBI agent stated in an affidavit that he was in the room when Huffman first heard the pitch from a scam insider.

It was unclear when the "Full House" star Loughlin would turn herself in. Loughlin's husband, fashion designer Mossimo Giannulli, was released in Los Angeles after posting a $1 million bond.

On Wednesday, a Silicon Valley hedge fund announced that it is replacing its head after he became ensnared in the scandal.

Manuel Henriquez, who was also the top executive investment giant PIMCO until 2016, will be replaced as CEO and chairman of Hercules Capital in Palo Alto, California. Henriquez was arrested in New York City on Tuesday and released on $500,000 bail. Shares of the hedge fund plunged 9 percent.

Hercules said that Henriquez will still hold a seat on the board and will serve as an adviser.

The coaches worked at schools such as Yale, Stanford, Georgetown, Wake Forest, the University of Texas, the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Stanford's sailing coach John Vandemoer pleaded guilty Tuesday in Boston. A former Yale soccer coach pleaded guilty before the documents went public and helped build the case against others.

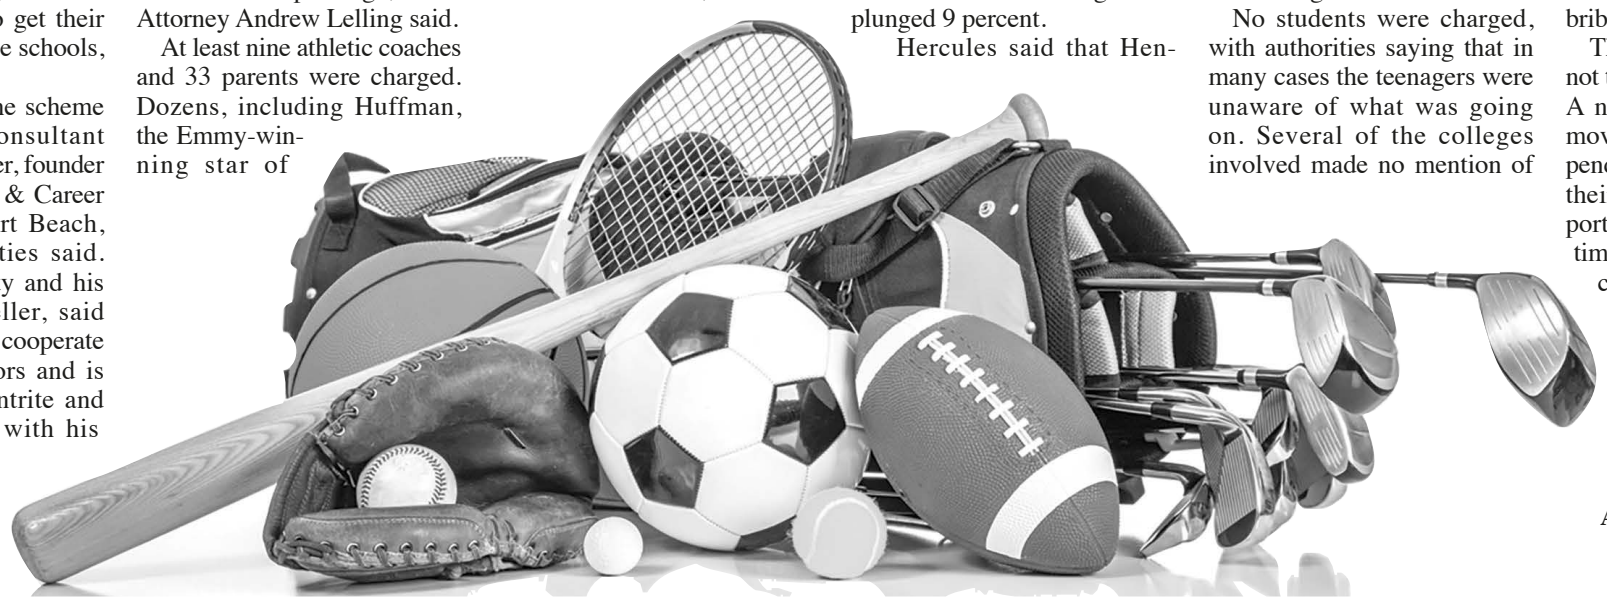
No students were charged, with authorities saying that in many cases the teenagers were unaware of what was going on. Several of the colleges involved made no mention of taking any action against the students.

Several defendants, including Huffman, were charged with conspiracy to commit fraud, punishable by up to 20 years in prison.

"For every student admitted through fraud, an honest and genuinely talented student was rejected," Lelling said.

Lelling said the investigation is continuing and authorities believe other parents were involved. The IRS is also investigating, since some parents allegedly disguised the bribes as charitable donations.

The colleges themselves are not targets, the prosecutor said. A number of the institutions moved quickly to fire or suspend the coaches and distance their name from the scandal, portraying themselves as victims. Stanford fired the sailing coach, and USC dropped its water polo coach and an athletic administrator. UCLA suspended its soccer coach, and Wake Forest did the same with its volleyball coach.



A twist in usual college sports scandal

Scandal grew from a system that was ripe for corruption

By RICK ECKSTEIN

As part of the "Operation Varsity Blues" case that federal prosecutors announced March 12, dozens of people — including Hollywood actresses and wealthy businessmen — stand accused of having bought their children's way into elite colleges and universities.

As a researcher who has studied how young athletes get admitted to college, I don't see a major difference between this admission fraud case and how many wealthy families can buy their children's way into elite colleges through "back" and "side" doors.

In my research, I show how most intercollegiate sports are fed by wildly expensive "pay to play" youth sports pipelines. These pipelines systematically exclude lower income families. It takes money to attend so-called "showcase tournaments" to get in front of recruiters.

In many ways, then, those ensnared in the current criminal case – which alleges that they paid for their children to get spots on the sports teams of big name schools – couldn't have succeeded if the college admissions process wasn't already biased toward wealthier families.

BYPASSING THE FRONT DOOR

Even if college sports is taken out of the equation, the college admissions process already favors wealthy families in a variety of ways.

It has long been known that higher family income usually correlates with higher standardized test scores. There are many test prep companies, including some that guarantee higher scores for approximately $1,000. Taking advantage of test prep may not be "fraud." But it certainly provides advantages to the wealthy that have little to do with academic merit.

In his book "The Price of Admission," Daniel Golden highlights a number of other ways wealthy families can buy their way into elite universities. These include large donations, financing new buildings, creating endowments and playing on parents' celebrity status. These also have little to do with an applicant's academic merit, but would never be considered criminal.

Sociologist David Karen has documented how attendance at expensive boarding schools gives wealthy students an admissions advantage to Ivy League universities. That may not be fraudulent, but it certainly seems unfair.

ATHLETICS AND ADMISSION ADVANTAGES

So how do the wealthy get an advantage when it comes to college athletics? Research has shown that recruited athletes receive the largest admissions advantages independent of academic merit.

The advantage varies by sport and athletic division, but is almost universal within higher education. Many sports – particularly squash, lacrosse, fencing and rowing – are pricey to play, so rich kids get opportunities that are out of reach for the poor. Even non-elite sports such as soccer and softball are subject to class-based restrictions.

The Mellon Foundation's report "College and Beyond" found that recruited athletes with lower academic credentials get admitted at four times the rate of non-athletes with similar credentials.

ATHLETE SCREENING

In the Varsity Blues case, some students' parents essentially bought their children's spot on a team. For instance, Stanford sailing coach John Vandemoer is charged with accepting contributions to the sailing program in exchange for recommending two prospective students. He pleaded guilty March 12.

How could a coach pull off this sleight of hand without drawing attention?

The answer, I believe, lies in the growing role of intercollegiate sports in adding some predictability to the very unpredictable enrollment process. Schools want to lock prospective students in as quickly as possible. College athletes are generally admitted through a school's early decision process. As the proportion of admitted athletes increases, so does the proportion of locked-in applicants.

Colleges also benefit by admitting more students early since those people are not part of acceptance rate calculations. The result is a lower acceptance rate, which inflates the school's perceived selectivity. This in turn spurs an increase in future applications, which further lowers the acceptance rate – and again increases perceived selectivity – without any objective changes in the actual quality of teaching and research.

College sports teams are an increasingly attractive venue for locking in these early admissions. It is not unusual to have 30 or 40 players on a college soccer or lacrosse team. Most will never play. Women's crew teams often have more than 100 rowers. Most will never get into a boat. Many will quit the team after one season but remain students.

Of course, because a family can afford to have their child play a sport doesn't mean the student is a good athlete. The pipeline system is far better at identifying the best payers rather than the best players. Since scholarships are quite rare, it costs colleges almost nothing to have some bad players on the roster. And there are benefits.

I'm certainly not defending the families and entrepreneurs at the heart of the Varsity Blues scandal for breaking the law to take advantage of a system already fraught with inequalities. The prosecutors in this case have insisted that "there can be no separate admissions system for the wealthy." For that to be true, current practices that favor deep-pocketed families would have to be abandoned. That will require much more than prosecuting a few people who use their wealth to take advantage of an admissions process that already favors the rich.

What if St. Patrick had requested a silent prayer instead?

By JAMES FARRELLY

In 1997, my students and I traveled to Croagh Patrick, a mountain in County Mayo, as part of a study abroad program course on Irish literature I was teaching for the University of Dayton. I wanted my students to visit the place where, each July, thousands of pilgrims pay homage to St. Patrick, who, according to lore, fasted and prayed on the summit for 40 days.

While there, our tour guide relayed the story of how St. Patrick, as he lay on his death bed on March 17 in A.D. 461, supposedly asked those gathered around him to toast his heavenly journey with a "wee drop of whiskey" to ease their pain.

The mention of whiskey left me wondering if St. Patrick may have unintentionally influenced the way most of the world celebrates the holiday today: by drinking.

It wasn't always this way. The Festival of St. Patrick began in the 17th century as a religious and cultural commemoration of the bishop who brought Christianity to Ireland. In Ireland, there's still an important religious and cultural component to the holiday, even as it has simply become an excuse to wear green and heavily drink in the rest of the world.

THE LEGEND OF ST. PATRICK

Because historical details about St. Patrick's life remain shrouded in speculation, scholars are often stymied in their attempts to separate fact from legend.

In his spiritual memoir, "Confessio," St. Patrick describes how he was brought to Ireland as a slave. He eventually escaped, rejoining his family in Britain, probably Scotland. But while there, he had a recurring dream, in which the "Voice of the Irish" called to him to return to Ireland in order to baptize and minister to them. So he did.

The Irish revere the account of this dream described in the "Confessio;" they accept the simplicity and fervor of his words and feel a debt of gratitude for his unselfish commitment to their spiritual well-being.

St. Patrick's efforts to convert the Irish to Catholicism were never easy. Viewing him as a challenge to their power and authority, the high kings of Ireland and the pagan high priests, called Druids, resisted his efforts to make inroads with the population.

But through his missionary zeal, he was able to fuse Irish culture into Christianity, whether it was through the introduction of the Celtic Cross or the use of bonfires to celebrate feasts like Easter.

Again, many of these stories could amount to no more than myth. Nonetheless, centuries after his death, the Irish continue to show their gratitude for their patron saint by wearing a spray of shamrocks on March 17. They start the day with mass, followed by a daylong feast, and prayer and reflection at night.

ST. PADDY'S DAY GOES GLOBAL

From 1820 to 1860, almost 2 million people left Ireland, many due to the potato famine in the 1840s and 1850s. More followed in the 20th century to reunite with relatives and escape poverty and joblessness back home.

Once settled, they found new ways to celebrate St. Patrick's Day and their Irish identity in their new homes.

Irish-Americans, especially, were quick to transform March 17 into a commercial enterprise. The mandatory "wearin' of the green" in all its garishness is a far cry from the original tradition of wearing a spray of shamrocks to honor St. Patrick's death and celebrate Irish solidarity. Parades famously sprung up – especially in New York and Boston – revelry ensued and, sure enough, even the beer became green.

Children of Irish-Americans in the United States have absorbed Irish culture at a distance. Many probably know that St. Patrick is Ireland's patron saint. But they might not fully appreciate his mythic stature for kids growing up on the emerald isle.

Ask children of any age in Ireland what they know about St. Patrick, and they will regale you with stories of his magical abilities, from his power to drive the snakes out of Ireland to his use of the three leaves and one stem of the shamrock to demystify the Trinity doctrine of the Catholic Church.

They see St. Patrick as a miracle worker, and as adults, they keep the legends alive in their own ways. Some follow St. Patrick's footsteps all around Ireland – from well to hill to alter to chapel – seeking his blessing and bounty wherever their journeys take them.

RAISING A GLASS

Of course, in America, the holy day is really a party, above all else.

This year, Americans are expected to spend $5.61 billion celebrating, with 13 million pints of Guinness consumed. Some parts of the country plan a pre-celebration on Sept. 17 – or, as they call it, "Halfway to St. Patrick's Day."

Where all of this leads is anyone's guess. But beginning in the 1990s, Ireland seemed to grasp the earning potential of the Americanized version. March 17 remains a holy day for the natives and a holiday for tourists from around the world, with pubs raking in the euros on St. Patrick's Day.

But I've always wondered: What if St. Patrick had requested a silent prayer instead of "a wee drop of whiskey" to toast his passing? Would his celebration have stayed more sacred than profane?

Still in committee, no hearing scheduled

Fate of hate crimes bill uncertain in 2019 legislature

By CALEB BAUER
South Bend Tribune

SOUTH BEND — The fate of a hate crimes bill that has become a focal point of the Indiana General Assembly session may be up in the air amid a rift between Republican legislators and Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb.

Local state lawmakers suggest the bill might not see a full vote in the Indiana House after an amendment last month watered down provisions advocates insist are necessary to get Indiana off the list of states without bias crime provisions.

The amendment, which some said "gutted" the bill, raised the specter of the economic and public relations fallout experienced as a result of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act in 2015.

"Essentially there's no bill right now," said Rep. Ryan Dvorak, D-South Bend who is on Courts and Criminal Code Committee, where the bill is currently assigned. "There's one pending in committee, but it's not scheduled for a committee hearing."

Originally, Senate Bill 12 would have given judges power to increase sentences for violent or property crimes because of a list of factors including the victim's race, religion, sex, gender identity or sexual orientation.

But an amendment by Sen. Aaron Freeman, R-Indianapolis, replaced that list with simply the word "bias."

That move led to broad criticism, including a public rebuke of the Indiana Senate from Indiana Governor Eric Holcomb and opposition by the Indiana Chamber of Commerce, civil rights groups and others.

Removing those characteristics, they say, would make the law less enforceable and also not satisfy the Anti-Defamation League's requirements to take Indiana off the list of five states without a law. The other states are Arkansas, Georgia, South Carolina and Wyoming.

Dvorak said he's not sure the bill will even be brought up during committee, let alone brought to the floor of the House for a full vote.

If the bill isn't heard in committee by April 9, it would be dead for the year unless it is tacked on as an amendment to another bill.

Social conservatives have opposed the list of protections, with groups including the American Family Association of Indiana arguing that it would give overarching protections to transgender individuals.

On Friday, a letter signed by 16 presidents of independent colleges and universities called for legislators to institute a bias crimes law "with an enumerated list of characteristics."

"Passing SB 12 as it stands today — without explicitly listing specific classes — will bring more harm to our state and further perpetuate the negative perception of Indiana," the letter read. "It will push out more of our students and detract more talent from coming in."

Signatories included Notre Dame President the Rev. John Jenkins, Saint Mary's College interim President Nancy Nekvasil and Goshen College President Rebecca Stoltzfus.

The letter follows others from business leaders and national civil rights organizations urging legislators to re-insert language that would protect people on the basis of sex, race, religion, sexual orientation or gender identity.

Mindi Goodpaster, co-chair of Indiana Forward, the coalition that has pushed for the hate crimes law, said she's unsure where members of the House stand on re- inserting the list of characteristics.

Goodpaster said previous conversations with legislators showed support from a majority for a general hate crimes law, but only if it didn't include a list of specific classes.

"Now we're setting up one-on-one meetings with all of the house members," Goodpaster said. "The information they're receiving — that if we don't have a list, we don't have a law — seems to be getting to them."

It's unclear if there are enough votes in the House to re-insert that list. State Rep. Ross Deal, D-Mishawaka, said his expectations are "somewhat guarded" on getting a re-insertion of the list passed, something he supports.

"I think that support is lukewarm," Deal said. "I think we have our work cut out for us."

One who doesn't support a specific characteristic list is State Rep. Christy Stutzman, R-Middlebury.

Stutzman, wife of former Third-District Republican U.S. Rep. Marlin Stutzman, said she opposes efforts to re-insert a list of characteristics, citing constitutional concerns and existing legal precedent that would allow trial judges to increase penalties in certain aggravating circumstances.

"We're really facing a dilemma here," Stutzman said. "We're trying to cover all citizens equally, and we don't want these (hate crime) cases to go unpunished."

Stutzman said she believes the state constitution precludes the legislature from writing a law she says would create a "protected class" of citizens.

The bill, as written now, is something Stutzman said she would support.

"I hope we get a chance to vote on that," Stutzman said. "But I don't know that we will."

Yazel said prior to this monitoring system, the county had to rely on overdose data after the fact. Now, working with law enforcement, emergency responders, health officials and other community members, including people who are actively using drugs, the department monitors where and when overdoses may be occurring, which allows them to respond to overdose trends in real time. This could mean getting emergency treatment as quickly as possible, such as naloxone, an overdose reversal drug that is carried by most local first responders and available to the public at the health department and Clark County syringe exchange site.

"We don't want data that we get monthly and find out that two weeks ago there was this overdose cluster that should have been addressed," he said.

The health department also recently launched the free Pulse Point app, which allows people with CPR training to be alerted when there is a person nearby in cardiac arrest and where the closest AED machine is; the idea is that the individuals may be closer than emergency personnel when such an emergency arises.

Carolyn King, member of grassroots community drug education and resource group Clark County CARES, said she and other are concerned with the increase last week, which Yazel said includes multiple overdoses at one location.

"There's obviously some bad batches out there," King said. The group met Monday and later asked Yazel, also a member, to look into getting fentanyl testing strips to give out at the syringe exchange; those who lead the Louisville syringe exchange have also recently begun giving them out, she said.

"That's one way of harm reduction," she said, also urging people to make sure they have access to naloxone; she said people who have consumed fentanyl may require more than one dose to be revived.

"People need to be very, very careful and keep naloxone handy if they are using," King said. "And people who care about people who are using need to make sure they're stocked up because these happen occasionally with very deadly batches and you just don't know what you're going to get."

The other two people aboard with Blakely were Conrad Aska, a 44-year-old first officer and co-pilot, and Sean Archuleta, a 36-year-old pilot for another airline who was aboard to get a ride to Houston.

The new details about the plane's sharp drop were released as countries around the world are grounding a different model of Boeing aircraft after two were involved in fatal crashes less than five months apart. The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration, however, has stood by the airworthiness of Boeing's 737 Max after the weekend crash of an Ethiopian Airlines flight.

Curtis said it remains unclear whether a problem with the plane's systems or human action was primarily to blame for the February crash.

If it is a technical issue, he said, that could warrant a broader review of the widely used Boeing 767.

Before the crash, the plane's stick shaker, which warns of an imminent engine stall, did not activate, according to the NTSB.

That means it's unlikely the pilots pointed the nose down to avoid stalling.

As the plane dropped, the agency said, it accelerated to 495 mph and gradually pulled up to a 20-degree descent. Curtis said this suggests the crew were trying to pull out of steep fall.

The jet, which had been carrying cargo from Miami for Amazon and the US Postal Service, disintegrated upon impact with the shallow bay.

The NTSB said investigators found one of the plane's engines and some landing gear west of the rest of the debris, which was spread over 350 yards of the swampy area.

Tidal waters carried some parts of the plane and much of its cargo south, and some wreckage was recovered up to 20 miles from the crash site, according to the NTSB.

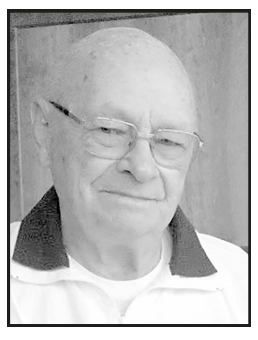
Castel "Robert" Black



Castel "Robert" Black died March 8, 2019, age 90, at Jewel Place in Madison. A native of Kent, Robert was born January 8, 1929, the youngest child of Castel and Verna Black. He grew up on the family farm and graduated from Hanover High School in 1947, where he lettered in basketball. In 1950 he married high school sweetheart Lillian Warman of Hanover, the love of his life and wife for 65 years.

Robert served in the United States Air Force from 1950-1954, achieving the rank of Staff Sergeant and deploying to Japan during the Korean War. Robert and Lillian settled in Greenwood and lived there for 36 years, raising their daughter Kathy. Robert made his living selling cars, first at Kelly Chevrolet and later as an independent car dealer. Robert was a member of Greenwood Masonic Lodge No. 514, Scottish Rite Valley of Indianapolis, Murat Shrine, and Greenwood Order of the Eastern Star No. 390. Robert and Lillian later toured the country in an RV and lived in San Diego, California, and Hillsboro, Oregon, before returning to Hanover in 2015.

Robert is survived by daughter Kathy Black of Albuquerque, New Mexico (husband Irving Robinson); grandson Robert Saunders (wife Tiffany (Quinn)) and great-grandson Landon Saunders of San Jose, California; and granddaughter Pamela Saunders (husband Javier Baylon) of Boston, Massachusetts. He was preceded in death by his parents, sisters Ethel Mary (Black) Heckman and Ruby (Black) Jones, and his beloved wife Lillian.

The family wishes to thank Robert's niece Charlotte (Jones) Meadows and neighbor Betty Carlton, both of Hanover, for their support and friendship during the last years of Robert's life.

Charlie's Beat

Kriss Luckett bringing maturity, story-telling to her songs

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

Last week we explored Greg Ziesemer's story and how he came to be a proud Madisonian. This week we pick up the other half of the story with his wife, Kriss Luckett.

Kriss's first experience with Madison actually preceded her relationship with Greg. She and a previous partner were camping at Clifty Falls and ventured downtown for a cup of coffee. Much to their surprise and delight, the coffee shop had a singer playing original music. (The Red Roaster still continues this tradition with The Chestnuts playing every first Friday at 6 p.m.)

"What an awesome little town," Kriss remembered saying. It wasn't long after this that Kriss and Greg started performing as a duo in Indianapolis where they lived, though they weren't dating yet. And this was also about the time Greg was frequenting Madison to visit an old friend and play solo gigs at Thomas Family Winery.

"Greg actually called me from the Winery one night," Kriss said. "He told me how cool Thomas Family was to play, and also how vibrant the music scene was here in Madison. He said it felt like a big city music spot."

"So I came down with Greg to play as a duo at the winery, it was 2003. And the response was great," Kriss said. "We started playing covers of popular hits because we assumed that's what people wanted to hear, but pretty quickly people started calling for our original songs."

"Soon after that, around 2005, Greg and I started dating. And we were coming to Madison so much on weekends we decided to buy a house, to save on motels if nothing else," Kriss said. "I got a job here, and Greg moved his furniture restoration business. We got married and I had our son, Jack, about 10 years ago."

Kriss Luckett

As it happens, Greg and Kriss don't perform in Madison as much as they used to.

"We're playing more back up in Indy, oddly enough," Kriss said. "A lot of festivals, house concerts, things like that.

"The venues in Madison don't focus on original music as much as they used to, not like back in the days of Joey G's," Kriss continued. "Joey really built the roots of the music scene here and he showcased a lot of local songwriting talent."

Speaking of songwriting, Kriss is enjoying a very prolific period right now.

"I have about 25 new songs that I'm waiting to record and start performing. Plus more are coming all the time," she said. "I'm kind of maturing as a songwriter, moving past simple love songs and getting more into life experience and stories."

I asked Kriss to share a little morsel of her new songwriting, and she obliged.

"I'm working on a new song titled 'Somedays,' and the chorus goes 'Sticks and stones are made of the bones from others' painful past.' The phrases just come to me at the oddest times. Sometimes even in my dreams. I feel like songs are sort of gifts."

Gifts we can all enjoy every time Kriss Luckett and Greg Ziesemer perform their special brand of Americana musical magic.

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK:

At the old Ross Theater in Scottsburg they are having regular live music under the banner Ross Country Jamboree. You can Google for a complete schedule, but this Friday and Saturday they have country star Gene Watson opening for Greg Perkins Band. Gene's signature song is "Farewell Party." Tickets for this show are higher than usual at $35. Friday at the Thomas Family Winery looks like fun with "Fiddle Wizard" Brian McClure doing St. Paddy's Party duties. Dancing is sure to ensue!

Charlie Rohlfing is a stalwart of the RiverRoots Festival committee, a campfire guitar strummer, and a partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening. Find him out and

Missing key in escape

Courier staff report

A missing handcuff key and lack of manpower were the two factors that led to the Jennings County Jail escape of inmate Kim Lynn Patton a week ago.

The Jennings County Sheriff's Office announced this week the conclusion of its investigation into the escape from the area jail for one day. Officers had initially warned the public Patton was in the North Vernon courthouse area, not armed but dangerous.

Within 24 hours of the escape, and with a citizen tip, the search ended Saturday with Patton once again behind bars.

"Old procedures from previous administrations will be replaced with new procedures and policies," the news release said. "Patton was transported in a transport vehicle with a transport cage where he was able to unlock his handcuffs."

The department included a missing handcuff key and a lack of manpower among the factors leading to the escape.

"A handcuff key was taken by an inmate at the booking counter which eventually landed in the hands of Kim Lynn Patton," the release said. "The jail officer noticed the key missing and notified his superior and the key was never found.

"Due to lack of manpower in the jail, only one jail officer was able to transport Patton to court where he had to park in an isolated area."

Patton now faces additional charges for the escape.

Cantwell resigns Carroll football to take CAL job

MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Sports Editor
mcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Under head coach Thomas Hunter Cantwell, Carroll County football posted its first winning season in six years, won a playoff game for the first time since 2013 and was building the foundation for perhaps even greater success in the future.

However, that rebuild must now fall under the watch of new leadership. Cantwell has resigned his position at Carroll County and been named the new head coach at Christian Academy of Louisville on Tuesday.

According to Carroll County Athletic Director Paul Stone, Cantwell informed the school of his resignation on Friday and held a meeting with his players and parents Monday to tell them he was leaving the program to take another position and thanked them for their support and efforts.

"The kids are pretty upset but that's just all part of it," Stone said. "They really liked Coach Cantwell and he's going to be hard to replace.

"When we hired him he said he wanted to be a high school coach because that's where he thought he could have the biggest impact and he did a great job at our school. Under his leadership our kids were better on the field, better citizens in our community and better in the classroom," Stone added.

Cantwell, who grew up in Paducah, Kentucky, where he was a standout player for Tilghman High School, is a former quarterback at the University of Louisville, the NFL's Carolina Panthers and Baltimore Ravens and the Owensboro Rage of the Continental Indoor Football League. He had coached quarterbacks and special teams at Campbellsville University before accepting the head job at Carroll County prior to the 2016 season.

Hunter Cantwell was 15-19 in three seasons at Carroll County but the Panthers were 7-5 last year — their first winning season since 2012 — and scored their first playoff win since 2013 and first home playoff win since 2002.

Cantwell's first two seasons at Carroll resulted in 4-7 records and first rounds playoff losses but last year the Panthers were 7-5 — their first winning season since 2012 — and earned a home playoff game for the first time since 2014, posted their first playoff win since 2013 and first home playoff win since 2002.

"I'm very excited the direction that CCHS football is headed. A strong middle school feeder program, excellent off-season participation, great assistant coaches in the community, and a very talented team coming back gives me assurance that this program will continue to have success for years to come!" Cantwell wrote in a post to the community both on Facebook and Twitter.

"Lastly to my players, I hope you know more than anything else what made it fun was you guys! You guys were an inspiration to me more than I ever was to you. Each weight session, practice, bus ride, and game was a blast because of your all's spirit. The memories, the victories, the lows, the highs, and the laughs I will cherish for years to come."

"I hate it. I do," Stone said of Cantwell's departure. "I was hoping he would stay a long time. Coach Cantwell has done a great job with our program but I realize he had to make the decision that was best for his family."

Stone noted that Christian Academy of Louisville is a program that's "had a lot of success" over the past few years and offers Cantwell an opportunity to return to the city where he played college football and take over a program that's already built for success.

The position opened up last month when head coach Stefan LeFors, another a former quarterback at Louisville, the Carolina Panthers and the Canadian Football League, resigned to return to his hometown Baton Rouge, Louisiana, where he will coach Parkview Baptist High School there.

Christian Academy of Louisville was 87-20 in eight seasons under

Fails Named Regional POY

Cam Fails

Hanover senior guard named top player in Great Lakes Region

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover College senior guard Cam Fails has been named D3hoops.com's Great Lakes Region Player of the Year and has been invited to play in the National Association of Basketball Coaches (NABC) Reese's Division III All-Star game.

The Reese's Division III All-Star game will be played at 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 16, in Fort Wayne at the Allen County War Memorial Coliseum. The contest will be played prior to the NCAA Division III Tournament National Championship.

Teams are composed of two senior student-athletes from each of the eight regions in Division III, as well as two seniors selected by online voting through D3hoops.com and two seniors selected by the All-Star game committee.

Fails, a senior from Cincinnati, is one of three players from the Great Lakes Region to make the squad and is the lone player representing the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference or an institution from the Hoosier state.

In addition, Fails is receiving his second first team all-region accolade and is the first player in program history to be named D3hoops.com Regional Player of the Year.

Prior to the start of the 2018-19 campaign, Fails had been named as a preseason All-American by D3hoops and Street & Smith's Annual Basketball Yearbook. Fails is also the lone representative from the HCAC on the D3hoops.com all-region team and is now an eligible nominee for the organization's All-American award.

Hanover blows out Eureka to run win streak to 3

sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover baseball used a six-run sixth inning to blow open a close game and pull away 10 a 10-3 win over visiting Eureka (Ill.) in the team's home opener on Tuesday.

The Panthers, winners of three-straight, were originally scheduled to play their first home game of the season last week, but snow forced cancellation of that game.

But with sunny skies and temperatures hovering around 50 degrees, Hanover was finally able to take the field at K.T. Young Ballpark in front of its home fans.

The two teams traded runs through the first few innings. Eureka (2-1) opened the game with an RBI single by Joe Quinn in the top of the first and Hanover answered with a Andrew Littlefield run-scoring single in the bottom of the frame.

The Red Devils went back on top in the second on a Grant Mullin RBI double but Hanover answered with a two-run double by Ty Stover in the third to go ahead 3-2.

Hanover then began to pull away in the fourth when Grant Larrimore got the run started by blasting a solo home run to left center to give the Panthers a 4-2 lead.

Josh Meszaros opened the scoring for Hanover in the sixth with a two-run single and Stover followed with a two-run single of his own to push the lead to 8-2. A Tyler Fitch RBI single and a Littlefield sacrifice fly led to two more runs and a 10-2 lead.

Eureka got one final run in the eighth on a Mullin run-scoring hit for the final margin.

Larrimore, a sophomore from LaGrange, Kentucky, and the half-brother of Southwestern High School head girls basketball coach Devin Brierly, went 3-for-5 with two runs scored to lead Hanover's offense while Stover was 2-for-4 with a double and four RBIs.

Mark Walkenhorst, Fitch and Littlefield each had two hits while Spencer Coop had a hit and scored a run.

Eli Copner (2-0) allowed three earned runs on five hits in eight innings with two strikeouts and no walks to pick up the win. Sam Crick worked a scoreless inning in relief with a strikeout.

Mullin went 3-for-4 with a double and two RBIs to lead Eureka. Quinn (0-1) took the loss after allowing three runs on five hits with two strikeouts and two walks in two and two-thirds innings.

Hanover (5-2) was to host Thomas More (Ky.) on Wednesday and then play three games at Wabash starting on Saturday.

COURIERAREA SPORTS SHORTS

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

— Madison Junior High's swim teams wrapped up the 2019 season with a split with Seymour at home on Monday.

The girls won 77-60 while the boys fell 72-71. The combined score saw the Bears win 148-132 to cap off a fourth-straight undefeated season.

"It was an outstanding season and there were several time cuts, records broken and more personal best times in the pool tonight," Madison coach Ashley Schutte said. "We had a number of personal challenges overcome, fears conquered, and growth abound — all things no score will ever capture adequately. So, so proud of these kiddos and so thankful to have each of them on our team — it truly is a great group of kids and they are wonderful ambassadors for our school!"

Winners for the girls were: Andie Royce-Miller, 200 free, 2:44.85; Lauren Gage, 50 fly, 33.87; and Lilly Canida, Emily Nay, Gage and Callie Anderson, 200 medley relay, 2:21.98.

Winners for the boys were: Liam Roney, 200 free, 2:16.55 and 100 free, 56.89; Peyton Ford, 50 free, 26.61; Preston Kuppler, 50 back, 34.32; and Kuppler, Gavin McMahon, Roney and Ford, 200 medley relay, 2:03.06 and 200 free relay, 1:49.64.

Reds' begin mound-to-outfield test with hard-hitting reliever Lorenzen

By GARY SCHATZ
Associated Press

GOODYEAR, Ariz. — Reliever Michael Lorenzen has begun the Cincinnati Reds' mound-to-outfield experiment, pitching one inning and then moving to center field Monday in a game against the Cleveland Indians. It didn't take long for the ball to find him.

Lorenzen

Lorenzen chased Jose Ramirez's leadoff double in the bottom of the sixth inning of a 5-5 tie, his biggest test during his first time in the outfield.

"It was fun," Lorenzen said. "I didn't necessarily get any fly balls but I had a couple hit to me. Hopefully next time I get to run one down."

The Reds are exploring options for replacing center fielder Billy Hamilton, who signed with the Royals. Lorenzen was a center fielder at Cal State Fullerton who also closed games on occasion. The Reds drafted him as a pitcher in 2013, and he has lobbied for a dual role in the majors.

He finally got his chance Monday.

Lorenzen came on to pitch the bottom of the fifth inning and retired all three Indians, two by strikeout. Instead of heading off to ice his shoulder, he looked for his batting helmet. He faced Mike Clevinger and struck out swinging, then replaced Nick Senzel in center field.

He started shading Ramirez, the first batter, toward right field, then moved back the other way. Ramirez hit the ball to the gap in right for a double.

"The game knows," Lorenzen said. "It was funny because I was actually shaded to right center. I ended up moving into left center."

In the seventh inning, Cleveland's Eric Stamets went from first to third on a single to center. Lorenzen fielded the ball and threw to third too late.

"I'd rather err on the side of overdoing it, that's my personality," Lorenzen said.

Lorenzen left after his two innings in the outfield.

First-year manager David Bell likes the option of using Lorenzen in center. After getting him ready to pitch during the first part of camp, Bell finally gave him a chance to play center.

"That's what we all wanted to see," Bell said after the game. "It is just different. It's all new to us. I've never been close to a pitcher who can do these things."

Lorenzen's success as a hitter in the majors has inspired Bell to try to unusual, two-position arrangement.

Last season, Lorenzen went 4-2 with a 3.11 ERA and one save in 42 relief appearances and three starts. He also batted .290 and led major league pitchers with four homers — including one grand slam — and 10 RBIs in 31 at-bats. As a pinch-hitter, he went 3 for 13 with two homers.

Six times, he entered the game as a pinch-hitter and stayed in to pitch. From June 24-30, he homered in three straight at-bats, including a grand slam. He became the first major league pitcher to homer in three straight at-bats since Colorado's Mike Hampton in 2001.

Senzel is a leading candidate for the job in center. He went 1 for 3 on Monday and is batting .381.

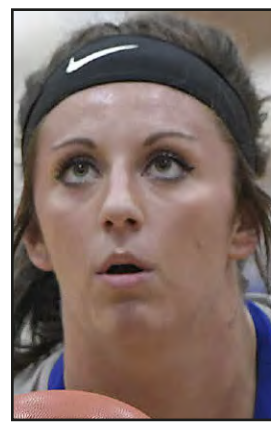
Hanover's Nall named to Great Lakes 1st team

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover women's basketball player Alexis Nall as been named a first team all-Great Lakes region selection by D3hoops.com.

Nall, who was the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference Most Valuable Player in 2018-19, was one of three league players to receive recognition from D3hoops. Rose-Hulman's Ally Bromenschenkel and Transylvania's Shelby Boyle were both named third team all-region. The junior from Mount Vernon is the first player in Hanover women's basketball program history to receive first team recognition from D3hoops.



Alexis Nall

Nall averaged 18.4 points, 10.5 rebounds and 2.2 steals per game during a career-best season, all of which were also team-highs for Hanover. Additionally, the junior broke her own school record for single season field-goal percentage, shooting 59.1 percent from the floor, which ranks among the top 10 marks in the country.

Her performance inside conference play was even better at 19.5 points, 11.1 rebounds and 2.4 steals per outing, while shooting better than 60 percent from the floor. For her efforts, the junior became just the third player in program history to receive the HCAC's MVP award. Nall was also selected to the HCAC's all-tournament team after averaging a double-double of 18.0 points and 13.0 rebounds per game as the Panthers advanced to the semifinal round.

Additional season stats from Nall include shooting better than 80 percent from the foul line and 45 percent from 3-point range. If she had attempted more 3-pointers earlier in the season and continued at the same clip, the junior would have been among the nation's top 3-point shooters as a forward. Nall also recorded 15 double-doubles this season, ranking her in the top 25 in Division III. She even posted a game of 30 points and 20 rebounds this winter.

Hanover concluded the 2018-19 season with a 19-8 overall record, including a 14-4 mark in HCAC play. Both marks set new program highs under head coach John Jones, who was in his fourth season at the helm of the Panthers.

A twist in usual college sports scandal

By Tim Dahlberg
AP Columnist

The latest federal probe into the seamy underbelly of college athletics uncovered just the opposite of what we usually expect: Instead of paying recruits to attend schools, coaches and top athletic officials at some of America's finest universities were selling spots on their rosters to the highest bidder.

Those spots in sports like rowing, sailing and soccer didn't come cheap. In charging 50 people in indictments unveiled Tuesday, prosecutors said some very rich people paid some very big money — up to $6.5 million in one case — to get their kids into places like Stanford, the University of Southern California and, yes, even Yale.

That might ordinarily not seem much like a crime, since a good college can be expensive. But these parents weren't exactly sending checks to the registrar's office. They were paying bribes, not tuition, and every spot they managed to secure for their kid at a top college meant another kid far more deserving would not be admitted.

Just rich people enjoying the privilege of being rich. Nothing to see here, or at least there wasn't until those indicted began showing up for their perp walks at courtrooms later Tuesday.

Corruption in college sports is hardly surprising, of course. Just last week a federal judge in New York sentenced three men in a recruiting fraud case to prison for conspiring to pay money the other way — to families of basketball recruits they wanted for various schools, and a second trial next month promises to highlight even more misdeeds.

That scandal drew the usual hand wringing about pay to play and the sordid influence big money has in big college athletics. The NCAA, as is its wont, appointed a commission headed by former Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice to study the matter, with predictable results.

But no one could say they saw this coming. The sports were minor, but the money was major.

The women's water polo coach at USC was charged with taking $250,000 to say two students applying for admission were recruits for the team so they could get into the school. The sailing coach at Stanford admitted he, too, accepted $270,000 to falsely promote two students as prospective sailors so they would be admitted to school.

And at Yale, former women's soccer coach Rudolph Meredith is charged with taking $400,000 to declare a Yale applicant as a recruit even though he knew she didn't play soccer. The indictments also allege that Meredith met with the father of another Yale applicant last April in a Boston hotel room and offered her a recruit designation for $450,000.

The money was enormous, which makes the scandal tasty enough. But this one has a bit of everything, from Hollywood actresses to Vegas casino executives to New York financiers.

And, interestingly enough, some kids who had no idea their parents were buying their way in.

The sheer breadth of the case is staggering, though some of the ways used to manipulate the system weren't exactly Ivy League worthy. In some cases head shots were photo shopped onto athlete bodies, while in others stories were simply made up about teams kids played on — one was conveniently in China — and awards they won.

Then again, the scheme in the other FBI probe of college basketball wasn't exactly rocket science either. And there were plenty of willing accomplices among major colleges, according to testimony in the New York trial that showed schools lined up to play the families of some players up to $150,000 to get them to their school.

That probe cost Louisville coach Rick Pitino his job, even though he denied knowing anything about anything. This investigation has already cost several coaches of lesser sports their jobs, and there could be bigger dominos to fall as it continues to unfold.

Different federal investigations, different scams. The argument could be made that the only thing they really have in common is they both exist because of the incompetency of the NCAA.

Yes, the NCAA called the latest indictments troubling and said they "should be a concern for all of higher education." Don't be surprised if another commission is formed, as the NCAA in its best amateur way tackles an issue it didn't see coming in the same way it has handled corruption in the sports that actually bring in money.

The timing couldn't be worse, if only because it reminds us of what big money that is. The NCAA will bring in more than $800 million this year in broadcast rights alone for a basketball tournament that will feature some of the schools linked to the FBI probe into paying players.

The latest indictment is embarrassing at best, damning at its worst. The NCAA has never been able to control under the table payments to players, and now it turns out the organization has been asleep at the wheel while coaches were lining their pockets with bribes, too.

It's time for the NCAA to be accountable, time for president Mark Emmert to step aside.

Spare us another commission. Just give college athletics some new leadership at the top.

•Fails

Fails finished the season with a conference-best 20.9 points per game average, while also setting career-high marks in rebounds (4.3), assists (4.3) and steals (2.2) per game. For his efforts, Fails was named HCAC Most Valuable Player and HCAC Tournament MVP for the second consecutive year and was tabbed the league's player of the week on four occasions.

On a national level, Fails was announced as a top 100 finalist for the Bevo Francis Award, given to the top small college basketball player in the country from NCAA Division II and III, or the NAIA, USCAA and NCCAA, as well as a top 10 national finalist for the Jostens Trophy, the Division III Player of the Year award for basketball, academic and community service excellence.

Hanover compiled a 21-7 record this season, including a 14-4 mark in HCAC play. The Panthers won their third-straight HCAC regular season and tournament championships en route to a third consecutive NCAA Division III National Tournament bid. Hanover was defeated in the opening round by Wheaton (Ill.), which will be playing the national semifinals this weekend.

During his collegiate career, Fails was a part of a program that had six total conference championships, three NCAA National Tournament appearances — including a run to the Elite Eight in 2016-17 — and an overall record of 83-30 (.735). The senior also finished his career with 1,780 points, which ranks fifth all-time at Hanover.

•Cantwell

LeFors and the Centurions won Class 2A state championships in both 2016 and 2018. The program will move up to Class 3A for the 2019 season and play in District Four with DeSales, Henry County, Mercer County and Western Hills.

"Our goal this year will be to once again win the district championship, regional championship and become state champions in 3A," Cantwell said at his introduction on Tuesday.

"I think the sport of football is a great vessel to teach character building and spiritual lessons that will carry over into life," Cantwell added. "CAL has been doing this not only in the classroom but also in athletics since its inception. That is what drew me to this exciting opportunity to be a part of the work the Lord is already doing through CAL."

"We are excited that Hunter will be leading our football program," CAL athletics director Brad Morgan said. "His knowledge and experience, along with his love for Christ and drive to mentor young men, make him a great fit. I am confident that his vision of capitalizing on our strengths at CAL will continue the great success of our football program."

And since the program returns the majority of its starters from 2018 when the Centurions were 15-0, CAL does indeed represent a coaching destination where Cantwell can pursue state championships right from the start.

It's also the kind of program Stone thinks Cantwell was building at Carroll County and the kind of program he wants the school's next coach to continue to develop.

"We've got a chance to be pretty good next year — maybe even better — and we still can if we get the right person in here," Stone said of his pending coaching search. "We'll advertise the position and get the best coach we can get and move forward."

Stone said finding a knowledgeable, relatable leader like Cantwell may not be easy but it's exactly what Carroll County must do in order to continue the upward momentum the program has seen during Cantwell's tenure.

"The fact that he came here for three years shows that we're a pretty good place to coach," Stone said. "But we've always been a good place. Our facilities and situation speak for themselves. Our community loves football. We've invested in our field and our weight room facilities and set our kids up for success."

The head football position is not the only post Stone is looking to fill. Girls varsity basketball head coach Ron Henderson resigned suddenly last month and Carroll County is also looking to fill that position. Stone, the former girls head coach at Carroll County himself, said he's looking for the same type of candidate for that job and he hopes to fill it sooner than the football since it's been vacant longer.

Both positions — football and girls basketball — pay an $8,000 annual stipend in addition to whatever pay the candidate will earn as a teacher. Cantwell's departure opens up a position in physical education.

Stone invited anyone interested in either position to submit an application and resume. He said both positions are advertised on the KHSAA website.

Practicing on the pavement

Madison's baseball team opened practice for the 2019 season on Monday, using the parking lot at the high school instead of diamond at Gary O'Neal Field because recent wet weather made for soft field conditions. Zach Forner (left) throws back to a teammate during warmups while Quinten Humes (above) underhands to a teammate during middle infield drills. Carroll County hosts Conner on Monday in the first high school baseball game of the season locally. Madison's season opener is set for March 26 at North Harrison. (Staff photos by David Campbell)

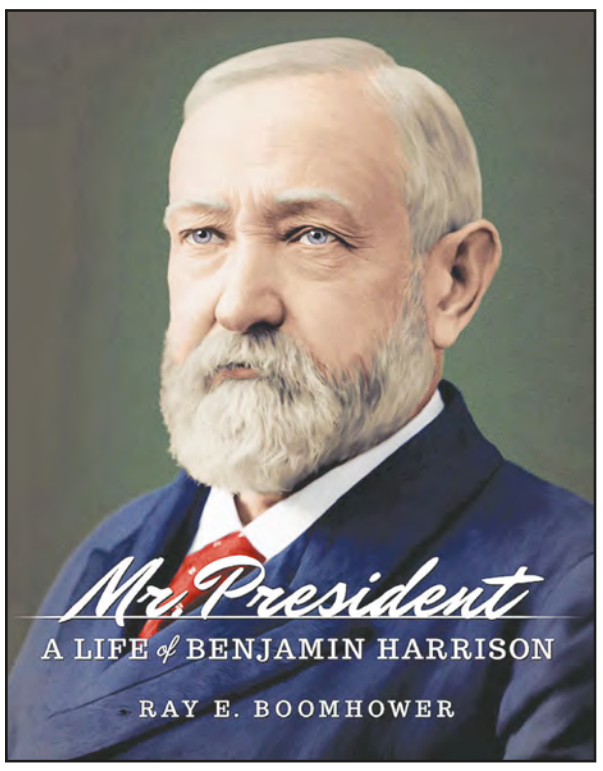
Author to sign book based on life of Harrison in Madison visit



Ray E. Boomhower will sign copies of his most recent book, "Mr. President: A Life of Benjamin Harrison," from noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, March 16 at Village Lights Bookstore on Main Street in Madison.

Boomhower, senior editor at the Indiana Historical Society Press and an award-winning author, also has written biographies of many other notable Hoosiers, including World War II correspondent Ernie Pyle, astronaut Gus Grisson and Union general and author Lew Wallace. He also will sign those books.

The book about Harrison examines the political rise and presidental legacy of Harrison, America's 23rd president. The 13th volume in the historical society's Youth Biography Series, "Mr. President: A Life of Benjamin Harrison" will explore Harrison's ascent to political prominence after his service as a Union army general during the Civil War. The novel also delves into the critical role Indiana, Harrison's adopted home state, played in the national elections during the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Since the Indiana Historical Society Press Youth Biography Series began in 2005, it has examined the lives of a variety of Hoosiers, including Indiana's first saint, Theodora Guerin; black sheriff Oatess Archey, and correspondent Pyle. For more information about the Youth Biography Series or other publications by the Indiana Historical Society Press, call (317) 232-1882 or go to www.indianahistory.org

Comedian Conover to perform at Hanover Enrichment Series

Comedian Adam Conover, host of television show "Adam Ruins Everything," will be performing on the Hanover College campus next week.

Conover will appear at 7 p.m. on March 22 in Collier Arena as part of the Hanover Enrichment Series.

Conover's popularity has soared through his work on "Adam Ruins Everything," which dispels society's most common misconceptions about everyday goods and services. The show, now in its third season, also reveals untold and hidden facts about topics ranging from vacations, housing and lawn care to food expiration dates, the American Revolution and Mount Rushmore.

Along with his television work, Conover also voices a number of characters on the Netflix original series "Bojack Horseman."

Conover began work as a sketch comedy writer and cast member at CollegeHumor in 2012, where he helped write CollegeHumor Originals, appeared in a number of videos and helped create content for the website's YouTube channel. He also created an online series that would eventually become "Adam Ruins Everything." The first nationally televised episode of this series aried on truTV in 2015.

Before joinging College Humor, Conover was an instructor and performer at The Upright Citizens Brigade Theatre in New York. He also previously wrote, directed and performed in more than 200 sketches as a member of the comedy group Olde English and acted in the feature film "The Exquisite Corpse Project."

General admission tickets are $15 for adults and free for college students and children high-school age and younger. Tickets are avaliable at www.hanover.edu/arts

Thompson-Powers vows exchanged

Samantha Ashley Thompson of Fort Wayne and Braxton Ryan Powers of Fort Wayne exchanged vows Saturday, October 6, 2018, in Fort Wayne. Paul Bowman officiated the ceremy.

The bride is the daughter of Jerry and Angie Thompson of Wolcottville. She is a 2013 graduae of Lakeland High School and a 2016 graduate of Indiana University — Purdue University Fort Wayne. She is employed with Lutheran Hospital in Fort Wayne.

The groom is the son of Mark and Patricia Powers of Madison. He is a 2011 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School and a 2016 graduate of Indiana University — Purdue University Fort Wayne. He is employed with NISCO in Topeka.

The bride's escort was the bride's father, Jerry Thompson. The bride's sisters, Abi Thompson and Carley Thompson served as maids of honor. Bridesmaids were Cara Tackett and Ashley Lilley.

The groom's brother, Coltin Powers, and friend, Jason Joyner served as best men. Groomsmen were Andy Fullenkamp and Aaron Lilley.

The guest registry attendant was Amber Powers.

A reception followed the ceremony at Goegleins Homestead. The couple celebrated with a wedding trip to Jamaica.

They reside in Fort Wayne.

A local wedding celebration will be held Saturday, March 30, 2019 from 4:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. at Hebron Baptist Church. All family and friends are invited.

PETS OF THE WEEK

JEMMA

Jemma may only be a 4-month-old puppy, but she already knows to walk nicely on leash and to sit on command. At the shelter, Jemma lets the staff know when she needs to go out to do her business. She is a smart girl, is very eager to please, and is a fast learner. Jemma will be everything her adopter wants in a puppy. Jemma enjoys playtime and she enjoys snuggle time. She is a friendly and outgoing 30 lbs. girl who will be a big dog when she grows up. The shelter is guessing that Jemma is a Labrador Retriever/Pit Bull Terrier mix. She is mostly black with some white sprinkled strategically. Jemma's adoption fee is $30 plus the cost of her spay and rabies vaccination.

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has 16 dogs or puppies, and 16 cats or kittens available. Pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption can be viewed at www.sisaveapet.com.

Normal shelter hours are Monday, Thursday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., and Saturday from noon to 4 p.m. It is closed Sunday and Tuesday. The shelter number is (812) 273-1788 and the email is jcas39@seidata.com

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spay or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

The shelter is a registered organization with the Kroger Community Rewards program. To support the shelter, register a Kroger card at www.krogercommunityrewards.com and enter FL919.

Support the shelter while walking your dog. Use the "Walk for a Dog" or "Woof-Trax" app available through the App Store or Google Play. For each mile walked, a donation is made to the shelter.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, IN 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours. The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. Recent donations have helped get treatment for a beagle with a skin infection and a cat with wounds. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call (812) 265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call (812) 265-2648.

RAIN

Rain is a sweet girl with a beautiful pastel coat. She really enjoys being loved on. However, Rain does not like to be picked up or carried. So, just let her decide when it is time to snuggle. It appears Rain may have been an only pet previously and will need some time to adjust to other pets. She learned by necessity at the shelter that other pets are not so bad to have around. A home with young children is not ideal. Jemma is a 2- to 3-year-old, muted Tortoiseshell who weighs 6 lbs. She is $45 off her adoption and spay fee courtesy of the shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Shelter looking for foster homes

Foster homes are needed at the Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter. The shelter is accepting applications to foster dogs and cats who are either pregnant, nursing, being treated for heartworm or are recovering from an illness or injury and are not currently adoptable.

The shelter does not use foster homes for animals who are currently healthy and adoptable or who are on their stray hold as they need to be at the shelter for the public to meet, adopt or reclaim them. If you are interested in fostering, any animal already in the foster home must be up-to-date on vaccinations and spayed or neutered. A home inspection will be completed by shelter staff and everyone in the foster home must agree to shelter guidelines.

The shelter pays for medical care and will help supply food. Applications can be picked up between business hours on Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesdays from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., and Saturdays from noon to 4 p.m. The shelter is currently closed on Sundays and Tuesdays. For more information, call (812) 273-1788 or email jcas39@seidata.com

Registration open for animal shelter annual 5K Run/Walk fundraiser

Registration is now open for the Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter's Annual 5K Spring Sprint Walk/Run.

The Spring Sprint will be Saturday, April 20, with an 8 a.m. 5K jaunt through Miles Ridge. Participants can run with their dogs with a proof of a recent rabies vaccination.

Participants can register by March 30 for $20, which includes a race t-shirt. Registration after March 30 is $25 with no guarentee of a t-shirt.

Registration forms are available at the Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter or on the Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter Facebook page. All proceeds will go to the shelter building fund and checks can be made out to the Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter Building Fund.

Race times will be tracked but no prizes are awarded so all proceeds can benefit the shelter. The top three finishers in each age category will be published on the shelter Facebook page and webpage.

For more information, call (812) 273-1788 or email jcas39@seidata.com

Are thank-yous considered old fashioned?

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: Is it considered old-fashioned to send an actual thank-you by mail these days?

We attended the wedding of a relative last summer — the second wedding for both the bride and the groom. They had a big church wedding and a fancy reception. Many friends and relatives were there to share in their happy day, some traveling from out of state.

It's now eight months later, and there has been zero acknowledgment of our wedding gift to them. I know that it didn't get lost or misplaced, because I've asked other people who attended and found that no one has been thanked.

If we had been thanked via email or text, it would have been tacky, but at least we would have been thanked. Yes, people are busy these days, but it's extremely rude to not thank people for attending a wedding and giving a gift.

Maybe the happy couple will see this and it will register. I'm not sure. Thank you for letting me get this off my chest. — Tired of Rude People

Dear Tired of Rude People: No, it is not considered old-fashioned to write a thank-you note to your guests for attending your wedding and giving a gift. In fact, it is rude not to do so.

Handwritten notes are the most thoughtful way to show appreciation. An emailed thank-you suffices. If the people who gave gifts are just hearing crickets, that's just plain rude.

Dear Annie: I read your response to "Husband of a Hoarder." I have quite a lot of experience with this, seeing as my mother was a hoarder and I have some tendencies in that direction myself. If "Husband of a Hoarder's" wife shrieks and yells, she is refusing to recognize that she has a problem, and though your idea of encouraging small victories is fine, she must want to recognize a problem and want to correct it. My mother never did.

You suggested Marie Kondo's book. Though that's good for some people, it's very absolutist in its approach. I have found that commitment to a 15-session support group using the book "Buried in Treasures: Help for Compulsive Acquiring, Saving, and Hoarding" — by David F. Tolin, Randy O. Frost and Gail Steketee -- is better.

Saving and hoarding are two aspects of the problem, but the wife in the letter seems to have the serious issue of compulsive acquiring. Even if her husband makes inroads when it comes to getting stuff out, if more is coming in uncontrollably, he will make no headway. Acquiring is still an issue for me, but the book makes people who want to change aware of why they are how they are. My mother never saw that she had a problem and hence never changed, and the only answer was getting dumpsters when she died. A sad reality. — Daughter of a Hoarder

Dear Daughter of a Hoarder: I'm very sorry for the loss of your mother. Thank you for sharing some great tips to overcome hoarding. I'm printing your letter in hopes that it helps other people struggling with a similar situation. Other readers wrote in recommending the same book, "Buried in Treasures."

Congratulations on taking steps to seek help for yourself and sharing your experience with others.

REQUEST FOR BIDS

The Jefferson County Highway Department is requesting bids for the following bridge superstructure replacement project:

Jefferson County Bridge #142 RECTOR ROAD OVER HENSLEY CREEK Jefferson County, Indiana
BID SUBMITTAL DEADLINE: 3:00 PM on March 21, 2019

Scope of Work: The general scope of work involves replacing the existing superstructure by removing the existing prestressed concrete box beams in their entirety, including all bridge rail, and incidental work. Work shall also include installation of a new side-by-side prestressed box beam superstructure with a waterproofing membrane and an asphalt overlay. New bridge railing will also be installed as part of the project. Refer to the attached scope of work statement and specifications for additional details. All work is to be in conformance with the 2018 INDOT Standard Specifications, and as more fully described in the remainder of these quote documents.
Construction Schedule: Notice to proceed shall be granted at the Contractor's request, but no later than May 1, 2019. All work must be completed and the road opened to traffic within 45 calendar days from the date of the full notice to proceed. An initial partial notice-to-proceed will be issued to the awarded Contractor in order to complete the design and shop drawings for the prestressed beams. Upon approval of these submittal items, and when beams are ready for delivery, a full notice-to-proceed will be issued for the Contractor to begin site work and close the road to traffic.
Road Closure: The road shall be closed to traffic during construction for a maximum period of 45 Calendar Days. The Contractor shall provide the Owner at least five (5) calendar days' notice prior to closing the road to traffic and prior opening the road to traffic, in order for the Owner to plan for closure and reopening of the roadway. Prior to closing the roadway, and during all construction phases, the contractor shall be responsible for installing and maintaining adequate road closure traffic maintenance items, including adequate barricades and signage per the AASHTO Uniform Manual of Traffic Control, in order to ensure a safe worksite for its personnel and the traveling public. Cost for such traffic control devices, as determined necessary by the Contractor, shall be included in the Contractors lump sum bid. Advanced warning signs shall be placed at the nearest intersections with barricades to prevent through traffic from using this segment of county road.
Plans: Approximate plan details of the proposed repair work are included in these quote documents. No site survey was acquired for this project; therefore, the plans and estimated quantities are approximate and meant only to give a general representation of the work to be performed under this lump sum quote contract. The awarded Contractor shall check all site measurements prior to ordering any materials for the work and shall be responsible for installation of all items shown in the work even if slight variations in the work exist due to differing site dimensions.
Inspection: The work will be inspected by the Engineer, who is the Jefferson County Highway Department Superintendent, or the Engineer's duly authorized representative.
Utilities: The Contractor shall be responsible for coordinating with any utilities affected by the work. It is not anticipated that utilities will be affected by the proposed work. The Contractor shall confirm such with all utilities within the project work area and shall call in for utility locates before starting any site operations.
Construction Materials: All materials listed in the scope of work statement and the attached plan details are to be provided by the Contractor and shall be in accordance with the INDOT Standard Specification and Special Provisions included herein.
Bids: Bids shall be lump sum, and shall include all materials, labor, equipment, and all incidentals necessary to perform the work as described herein. The Proposal form included herein shall be fully filled out and executed and submitted with the lump sum bid package. Estimated quantities in the Scope of Work are provided for general reference only. Minor deviations from the quantities are to be anticipated, and are not grounds for claim of additional payment, unless the Owner or Engineer orders changes to the general scope of work. The Contractor shall review the site and estimate their own quantities prior to submitting their Bid. Form 96 shall be filled out in its entirety and submitted with the Bid. The Agreement Between Owner and Contractor, attached herein, will serve as the construction agreement with the Contractor. Contractor shall fill in all blanks and execute the agreement for submittal with their Bid. If awarded, a fully executed copy will be sent to the Contractor along with the Partial Notice to Proceed dated per the Contractor's request, but no later than May 1, 2019.
Sealed Bids shall be submitted to the Jefferson County Auditor's Office, 300 East Main Street, Madison, IN 47250. The deadline for submittal is (3:00 pm), Thursday, March 21, 2019. All quotes will be taken to, opened, and read aloud at the Board of Commissioners regular meeting on Thursday, February 21, 2019, meeting begins at 5:00pm. The Bid package submitted shall include the name of the project and the Contractor's name on the outside of the sealed envelope containing the Proposal Form, Form 96, and the Agreement, all of which shall be fully executed along with all supporting documentation as required by Form 96, including a financial statement.
Questions: All questions concerning this project shall be submitted via email to the Design Consultant (USI Consultants, Attention: Mike Obergfell at obergfell@usiconsultants.com) prior to 3:00 p.m. (local time), March 18, 2019. A written response or addendum will be emailed to all bidders as deemed necessary. No questions will be answered by telephone unless they are proprietary in nature.

GREAT NEWS! WHILE DONNY WAS AT RECESS, I SMASHED YOUR PENCIL BOX WITH MY HAMMER!
IF YOU COULD GET MY PENCIL BOX BACK, WHY DID YOU BREAK IT UP??
WELL, I ALREADY BROUGHT MY HAMMER, AND IT SEEMED LIKE A SHAME NOT TO USE IT

AHA! I GET IT NOW. WE ARE IN A DUNGEON, JUST LIKE IN "CAVES OF ZGFRHKXP." OUR JOB IS TO ESCAPE.
WE HAVE THESE THREE ITEMS, AND DOORS TO OUR NORTH AND WEST. NOW, "ZGFRHKXP" IS A TEXT-BASED GAME, SO...
PICK UP ROPE! PICK UP ROPE!
IS HE TALKING TO US?
3-13
OKAY, SO THE ENVELOPE SHOULD GIVE US A CLUE ABOUT HOW TO USE THE ROPE TO GET THE KEY TO OPEN THE BOX.
IF MY EXPERIENCE HAS TAUGHT ME ANYTHING ABOUT THESE TYPES OF GAMES, WE SHOULD EXPECT A PLAY TIME OF ROUGHLY SIX HOURS.
SOLVED IT!

BRIDGE

IF YOU CAN SEE IT, TAKE TOTAL CONTROL

Nicole Kidman was quoted in "The Scotsman" as saying, "When you relinquish the desire to control your future, you can have more happiness."

A bridge player who does not worry about the later tricks in the play will usually end the deal with less happiness or money, or both!

How should the defense proceed in today's deal after West leads the diamond king against four spades?

The North hand was strong for a game-invitational limit raise because it had only six losers (you deduct one loser for a known 10-card or better fit), but weak for a Jacoby Forcing Raise with only 10 high-card points.

When North opted for the underbid, South raised to game because he had only five-and-a-half losers (one spade, one heart, two diamonds and one-and-a-half clubs, deducting half a loser for having the jack and 10).

East could see three defensive winners: two diamonds and the spade ace. From where might the fourth trick come?

The most likely answer was a club ruff. So, the original East played a discouraging diamond two, asking his partner to shift at trick two. West got the message, but he switched to the heart queen. Declarer won that, drove out the spade ace and cruised home.

East should have taken control by overtaking with his diamond ace at trick one and shifting to his club. Then he could have won the next trick with his spade ace, put his partner on lead with the diamond queen and received the lethal club ruff.

Take control when you know how to defeat a contract.
